

That Moment...

There will come a time in human kind where there will be no one to remember what we did and what we have discovered. That time will come in the future, but that isn't what we should be caring about. We need to stop worrying about what our future will hold. We need to care about the "now" or we will lose the special "spark" we get living our lives with the people we love and care about. There will come a moment in our lives when we will realize that those moments we spend with people who love us, those moments we want to freeze and keep forever, those moments we want to relive, those moments we want to cherish forever, those moments are special. Those moments represent the magic of the present. Those moments represent the magic of the moment!

Riya Patel
6th Grade